

Respect Campaign Ideas

Forest Grove High School

>>Respect Week

Forest Grove had 4 classes that went to local elementary schools and did presentations on respect. They handed out the respect challenge to students and asked them to make a respect chain. A week later they went back to follow up with the elementary schools to see how their respect chains turned out!

They also had people sign the pledge banner at the high school during lunches in the first week of March. Students handed out stickers and sold respect t-shirts. Students put up empowering respectful quotes around the school and started a month long respect campaign. Calendars were hung up around the school with different ways to show respect every day. There were also daily announcements about the activity taking place each day.

>>Respect – O – Grams

Students made and sold Respect-o-grams, which were little cards with candy that people could have delivered to someone they respected at school.

Sherwood High School

>>Unity Day

During lunch they had a pledge banner for student to sign. Student leaders walked around encouraging their peers and teachers to sign the pledge banner. They also educated those who pledged about inclusive language. Then they hung the banner up in the cafeteria to remind students and staff members of their commitment to promote an inclusive learning environment.

Clear Lake Elementary School

>> Respect Day

Clear Lake students signed the pledge banner during lunches. After they signed the banner they received a Respect sticker. At the end of the day the pledge banner was hung up on a bulletin for students, families, and staff to see. During this day all of the staff wore their Respect t-shirts.

Clear Lake followed up with their Respect Pledge by tying it into their Kindness Challenge that they partnered on with a local middle school.

Roseburg High School

>>Disability Awareness Parade

Roseburg participated in a community St. Patrick's Day parade and promoted disability awareness. Students walked in the parade with the pledge banner and educated the community about the Respect Campaign and encouraged them to sign the banner.

Sutherlin High School

>>Respect Week

Monday: Sold Special Olympics Oregon Respect t-shirts and spread awareness about why the R-Word is not acceptable.

Tuesday: Celebrated their school's Unified Sports program and educated students about what Unified means.

Wednesday: Sutherlin's Unified basketball team played a game in front of their entire student body.

Thursday: Student's signed the pledge banner.

Athey Creek Middle School

>>Disability Awareness Week

To kick off their Disability Awareness Week Athey Creek organized an all-school assembly to get their student body excited for a fun, educational and inspiring week of activities that included:

- Unified dodgeball game
- R-Word t-shirt design contest
- Pledge banner
- Pizza and bingo party

The Saturday after their Disability Awareness Week they had a Zumba fundraiser that was open to the community. This helped with the costs associated with their weeklong activities.

French Prairie Middle School

Ten student leaders worked together to create a short presentation about their upcoming Respect Campaign. They presented to classes and also spoke during morning announcements to make students aware of the campaign and why it was important.

During lunch students had the opportunity to sign a pledge banner and everyone that signed was given a pledge sticker. To wrap up their campaign they made a short presentation at an assembly to thank everyone for participating, pledging and raising awareness about respectful and inclusive language.

What will your school do?
